Fixed bridgework is being severely criticized at Tlxed Brldfitwork. the present time, although there is no doubt that this class of work is the most serviceable substitute we can supply in many cases. If carefully constructed along the lines we have all been taught, highly polished, and adapted in such manner that no irritation will result, the fixed bridge can be as easily cleaned as many of the natural teeth in proper alignment, and because of the fact that many people are too untidy, or perhaps better, too lazy to clean the fixed bridgework, and their own natural teeth, too, for that matter, or because the money-mad commercialist employs his abominable short-cut methods (and most of the criticized bridgework vvoud be found to...
